“Remember, celebrate, act”

- TRADOC Chaplain (Col.) Calvin Sydnor III

DLI joint service, local student honor Martin Luther King Jr. in standing ovation performances

The voice of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. resounded throughout the indoor staging area during the Defense Language Institute's Jan. 22 celebration. With background recordings of his speech providing the introduction, the spirit of his legacy carried throughout the evening's event with fervor and creativity by participants: the Training and Doctrine Command's staff chaplain, the Defense Language Institute students and a local high school sophomore.

“Dr. King's dream was for everybody: white, black, Asian, Jew, Arab, or Christian to get along together and eliminate racism,” said guest speaker Chaplain (Col.) Calvin Sydnor III, the TRADOC staff chaplain from Fort Monroe, Va. said. His theme, Remember, Celebrate, Act. “[He] challenged all Americans to live up to the Constitution and practice equality for all.

“I hope we will soon eliminate hyphenated Americans: African-American, Korean-American, Japanese-American, Arabic-American, Jewish-American and others and just become Americans to stand against waves of discrimination and eliminate inequality,” Sydnor said.

Musical and spoken talent, preceding and following his speech received repeated standing ovations. Arthur Waldrup, a Monterey High School sophomore, captivated the audience with his dramatic, emotional interpretation of Dr. King's famous speech, “I Have a Dream.” Reciting word for word, Waldrup has given this speech since the age of four.

Other testimonials were given by Spc. Mark Enders, a former Chinese language student from Company A, 229th Military Intelligence Battalion; and Pfc. Leola Oliver, a Korean student from Company A. Reciting a poem about Dr. King's life was Marine Lance Cpl. Bryan Keller.

“Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. said don't fight your persecutors, but follow through with your beliefs and don't strike anyone back,” Enders said. “He taught different kinds of love, he achieved a moral superiority over his accusers, and his dream was to have all ethnic groups be just Americans.”

“When he died in 1968, I was just six years old living in southern California," said Oliver. "His teachings taught me to eliminate racism, and his legacy must live on."

Airman Amber Wortham, a casual from the 311th Training Squadron, presented a dynamic modern interpretative dance to the music, "Instruments of your Peace."

For musical entertainment, Company A provided a soloist, a quartet, a pianist and guitarist. Pfc. Kareem Simpson, a Korean student, sang "The Eyes of a Sparrow," and the Company A choir sang, "I go to the Rock." Choir members consisted of Enders and Simpson, Pfc. Jason Trupp, a Korean student, and Oliver. Spc. Jeff Hockett and Pvt. 2 Richard Howard, both Korean students, accompanied the singers on piano and guitar respectively.

The Marine Corps and Navy joined together to sing "Somebody's Knocking at Your Door." Marine singers included Lance Cpl. Angela Larson, an Arabic student; Lance Cpl. Joshua Mahoney, a Spanish student; Lance Cpl. Dennis Martens and Pfc. Karen Adkison, Russian students. The Navy singers from the Naval Security Group Detachment were Seamen David Burns and Christopher Marshall, both Spanish students.

In the grand finale, all services joined together for a stirring and innovative rendition of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Before the program started, artist Theresa Matthews, the new outreach program coordinator for Army Community Service, exhibited her paintings of Dr. King.

The Presidio of Monterey chaplains section arranged for the guest speaker. Sgt. 1st Class Teresa Jackson, the installation's equal opportunity advisor, and unit representatives sponsored and coordinated the event. First Sgt. Michael Nicholson, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, narrated the program. Chaplain (Col.) Larry Hebebrand introduced the guest speaker, Chaplain (Col.) Sydnor, prefaced by remarks by Col. Daniel Devlin, Defense Language Institute Foreign Language Center commandant and commander of DLIFLC and the Presidio of Monterey.

"I saw and heard Dr. King speak in a nonviolent way about his ideals," Devlin said. "He knew the dangers and followed his beliefs. Wherever I travel, I always carry a small copy of the U.S. Constitution to remind me that this isn't a perfect world and there is still some inequality in our systems. I have great respect for Dr. King."

Origin of Delta Company's Mighty Duck:

The Mighty Duck originated in 1993 when the Commander, Cpt. John Richerson, allowed the graduating class to name the new Company mascot. At the time, Delta was transitioning from a Russian to an Arabic and Persian-Farsi company. These soldiers, knowing that they were leaving soon, sarcastically made the mascot "The Mighty Duck" after a very popular Disney movie of the time, totally unaware of the unit legacy that they were creating.

Mission statement:

Support the training of basic and intermediate Arabic, Czech, French, German, Greek, Hebrew, Italian, Persian-Farsi, Polish, Portuguese, Spanish, and Turkish linguists to a 2 listening, 2 reading, and 2 speaking proficiency as well as support soldierization training, and care for soldiers and their families.

HIV -- Did You Know?

Rehabilitation Act of 1973 protects HIV Positive individuals who can still perform their regular job

California's Confidentiality of Medical Information Act provides civil/criminal penalties for release of medical information by an employer (unless compelled by law) without a patient's consent (Civil Code Section 56-20; 56-21)

Commanders cannot release the name of HIV Positive individuals based on the Privacy Act and other Army Regulations

Doctors determine other person's "need to know" based on risk factors of the work environment

Normal behavior among children poses no appreciable risk of HIV transmission (Change 1, Army Regulation 608-10, paragraph 4-27)

Workers and children have legal rights to work, go to school, and do recreational events that do not endanger other people.

Army Regulations: 600-110, 635-40, 40-501

HIV and casual contact

HIV/AIDS and Child Care

HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus), the virus that leads to AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome), is not transmitted through everyday contact. HIV is a fragile virus, and no cases of transmission through casual contact have been reported in a child care setting anywhere in the world.

HIV is not transmitted by: •touching, hugging, or kissing; •sharing food, dishes, drinking glasses, or cutlery; •being coughed, sneezed, or cried on; •sharing toys, even those that have been mouthed; •diapers or toilet seats; •urine, stool, vomit, saliva, mucus, or sweat (untainted by blood).

HIV is transmitted from one person to another by semen, vaginal secretions, breast milk, blood, and body fluids containing blood, usually through unprotected sexual intercourse or the sharing of contaminated needles. It is also transmitted from mother to child during pregnancy or delivery or by breastfeeding.

Simple contact between blood and intact skin is not enough to transmit HIV. Three conditions are necessary for transmission: •The blood must be fresh. •There must be a sufficient quantity. •It must have a route of entry into the bloodstream of the uninfected person.

Biting often concerns parents, but there has never been a confirmed case of transmission by biting. To risk transmission, a child infected with HIV would have to have fresh blood in his mouth and break the skin of an uninfected child.

An uninfected biter would have a theoretical risk of exposure only if he broke the skin of a child infected with HIV and drew blood into his mouth. Such events are very unlikely. Parents also worry about accidents and fights, but fresh blood-to-blood contact among children is extremely unusual.

Children infected with HIV have the same right to attend child care as other children. HIV is considered a disability, and by law discrimination on the basis of disability is not allowed. Staff also cannot be discriminated against, fired, or non-renewed because of their HIV status.

Child care plays an important role in the lives of children infected with HIV, offering them peers, stimulation, stability, and the chance to learn new skills. A child's parents, physician and social worker will decide whether child care is suitable and monitor the child's progress. Child care staff probably will not know if a child is infected with HIV. Many children have no symptoms, and if no one in the family has been diagnosed as HIV-positive, the family may not even suspect that the child has the virus.

If the parents know, they have no obligation to tell the center. Because they may fear discrimination, they may keep the information to themselves. If they decide to tell an educator, he or she has an ethical obligation to keep the information confidential. There is no need for the parents of other children to know since a child with HIV poses no danger while engaged in the typical activities in a child care center.

It is important for child care centers to develop a health policy that respects the rights of all children and staff to privacy and confidentiality

For everyone's protection, the policy should include the use of universal precautions and proper hygiene, procedures for informing parents about contagious diseases, and procedures for excluding sick children and children with serious behaviour problems.

Magic Johnson, pro basketball player, deals with HIV Positive Virus

Earvin "Magic" Johnson, the Los Angeles Lakers pro basketball player, former all-star and most valuable player, is HIV-positive. He doesn't have AIDS. Although he announced his medical condition several years ago, he still leads an active life and supports AIDS and HIV research to eliminate the disease. Before his retirement from his pro basketball career, he played on America's Dream Team in the Summer Olympics in Barcelona, Spain, and in the National Basketball Association's All-Star games. The star guard-forward led the Lakers to several NBA championships.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX TIPS

(To be continued through the April 10 issue)

1. TAX TIP: In calculating whether I qualify for the earned income credit, what entitlements must I include? You must add "earned income" (wages, salaries, tips, and other employee compensation) with your quarters allowance (whether or not actually received), subsistence (BAS) and combat pay. You do not include VHA or COLA.

2. TAX TIP: When should I receive my W-2 forms from my employers? Not later than Jan. 31, 1999. By federal law, employers have until this date to furnish you your W-2 forms.

3. TAX TIP: When should I receive my statements of dividends and interest from my financial institutions? Not later than Jan. 31, 1999. By federal law, financial institutions have until this date to furnish you these statements.

4. TAX TIP: What should I do if I don't receive a W-2 from my employer or statements of dividends/interest from my financial institutions by Jan. 31, 1999? Write the employer and if this fails, write the IRS Center that services the employer/institution and complain to them. Contact the Legal Assistance Office for the IRS Center address.

5. TAX TIP: The W-2 income report I received in the mail has a huge computer error. It shows I earned $200,000 rather than $20,000. Can I just ignore the extra zero? Only if you want to hear from the IRS. Since your employer sent the same W-2 to the IRS, they will expect tax on $200,000. You should contact your employer and ask for a revised W-2.

6. TAX TIP: When do I have to make a contribution to an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) for a deduction on my 1997 tax return? Stateside and overseas taxpayers have until 15 April 1998. Soldiers stationed in a combat zone who have not already filed their federal income tax return may have a longer period and should contact a military attorney if they need tax advice on IRA contributions.

7. TAX TIP: Can I claim an IRA deduction on my tax return although I've not actually created one yet? Yes, if you in fact create one not later than April 15, 1998.

8. TAX TIP: What is the filing date for taxpayers overseas? If you primarily live and work outside the U.S. and Puerto Rico on April 15, 1998, you have until June 15, 1998 to file your return. Simply put on the outside of your envelope: "Outside the U.S. on April 15, 1998," to take advantage of the automatic extension. NOTE: Taxpayers who are merely traveling outside the U.S. or Puerto Rico on April 15, 1998 are not entitled to an automatic two-month filing extension.
